

SECURITY RESEARCH EVENT

Security Research: Future-bound to protect our society

The Hague - The Netherlands, 1 & 2 June 2016

Dear Sir/Madam,

The European Commission is pleased to invite you to its next annual 2016 Security Research Event (SRE) to take place within the Security Innovation Expo at the World Forum in The Hague, The Netherlands, during 1-2 June 2016.

As in years past, SRE 2016 will offer a content-rich conference and an exhibitors' area where suppliers will display their security innovations, services and systems.

Approximately 500 participants – researchers, industry representatives, public security providers and practitioners (i.e. fire departments, police, intelligence agencies, etc.) and policymakers from across Europe – are expected to attend this year's event.

Topics at the conference will address the security research requirements and potential solutions for border management, terrorism and radicalisation, financial investigations, law enforcement technology services, forensics, related space solutions and the broader societal challenges that security research must meet.

The Security Innovation Expo, organised by The Hague Security Delta, the Dutch Security Cluster, aims to boost cooperation between governments, industry and Europe's research sector. Security research projects financed by the Commission or implemented via The Hague Security Delta will showcase their latest innovations and achievements.

So mark your agenda now. The full SRE programme and registration details will be made available soon for this free-of-charge event.
